ing the type of wool can be improved, made more uniform, and better fitted for the purposes of the manufacturer. If English industry absorbs the wool, New South Wales is exposed to the task of producing both more and better wool.

So too with coal. The productive capabilities of this colony are practically unlimited. It is a truism that at present we do not raise more than a million tons a year, but the mines were so opened could double that output if there were more trade. There has been great output in England about the price of coal as well as in America, but the durability of the coal fields; and if the English coal is now so much wanted for the smelting of metals and the supply of steam-engines, all that the English coal owners have to do is to drop their export to the East, and the East, and the deficiency can at once be made good from the mines of New South Wales. The same can be said of the iron and the coal. The colony can provide the coal in any quantity.

ROYAL SYDNEY YACHT SQUADRON.—The second evolution day of the season came off on Saturday, and a better weather could have been wished for. A fine fresh N.E. wind was blowing, sending the smart clippers along at a rattling rate. The muster was to have taken place in Farm Cove, but the yachts kept under way, and at 2.30 p.m. the Miral, with Commodore Dangar on board, hoisted eight from Woolloomooloo Bay, with the signal "follow in line" flying, and running up to abreast of H. M. S. Albatross hauled her wind on the port tack and proceeded down the harbour in the only line of yachts that has

The signal was no longer made, "Form line to starboard of the vessel," and the boats were ordered to "stand on" up the harbour again, but the wind blew so hard that Bredley's, it became a matter of some difficulty to keep the larger craft back. Passing to windward of Fort Denison, they reached as far as Dawson Point; here they formed in single line, and formed in line; they were ordered to go Far Cove, and the leaders were ordered, showing the other yachts to pass and clear the strait, which ended the evolutions of the day. I last saw him alive this morning, about twenty-five minutes past 5; he was in his usual health; he got up then to open the house; on coming down stairs I found the house open as usual; my husband has been uneasy and restless during the last two or three nights; he was not more so than usual during the night; I did not see and was not armed; I told them there was no one there, and we went to the stairs to call Mrs. Williams; I went into the back yard, and on the top of an underground tank I took down a woman's slippers; the lid of the tank was open; I took a walk round the yard to see if he was about and did not see him; I asked Mrs. Williams if it was customary to leave the lid of the tank open, and she said "No," so I

He slips there, I told her I thought there was something wrong; I did not like to interfere; constable Finnigan came up shortly afterwards; the constable looked into the tank and said, "Oh, there he is—there is his body floating!" I saw decomposed taken out of the wall and carried into the laundry; it must have been nearly 6 o'clock; the tank or well is about 12 feet in depth and is full of water.

I received information from Mr. W. H. Williams that the landlady of this hotel was missing. I came to the bar of the hotel and saw Mr. Williams there; I asked if he was missing, he said she had not seen him since he got up; I proceeded to the back yard accompanied by the last witness and others; I found the back door of the tank open; I stooped down and saw the Williams smiling in the water.

Dr. Richard Harris deposed: About twenty minutes before 6 o'clock this morning, I did not, as quickly as possible, and by request, I came over to Williams's public-house; I was informed that Williams had drowned himself; on arrival I found deceased stretched on a sofa in a room; life was completely extinct; I examined the body, and found marks of external violence; I knew the deceased to be a subject to suicidal mania for some years; on a previous occasion he had attempted suicide by stabbing himself, and that occasion had expressed a determination to put an

He went to himself at some future time; he was placed under guard in Matlock goal for several months, and on his release immediately returned to his intemperate habits. He has frequently seen him in delirium since then, and I have no doubt that he carried out his determination by throwing himself into the water; death was caused by drowning.

I have closed the proceedings.

It appears (and the Shower-Advertiser) that he had been assisting Mr. Wilson, a drover, to cross some cattle over the Edward River, and after doing so, was riding with three or four other horsemen in the direction of the large bridge at South Danmellig. In the attempt to get to the other side, the other horsemen, by the aid of Mr. Lollitt (the horse-drover), were enabled to speak to him in reference to his cattle. They both pulled up their horses; and while conversing, the other horsemen rode by. Mr. Mathewson's horse carrying him with great force against that of the horseman. But as the laudacious proprietor is constantly adding to the novelties which he displays, it is scarcely possible, even for those who go frequently, to find some new attraction on each occasion. The most recent addition is on rather a large scale, and consists of a very tastefully fitted up concert room, capable of so-accommodating about 100 persons. Here a vocal and instrumental concert is given every evening by the Misses Allison and Clara Spencer and Master Arthur Spencer, in a manner that is very creditable to the performers. These concerts will, no doubt, add materially to the popularity of the establishment, and make more complete that success which the proprietor deserves. The only noticeable drawback

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL,
THURSDAY, DECEMBER 5.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 18.
The late Mr. W. C. Wentworth.—The President reported that he had communicated to Mrs. Wentworth the resolution of the Council in favour of a public funeral to be accorded to the remains of her late husband, and that in reply she said she coincided with the other members of the family, in marking the wishes of the country, as expressed by both Houses, should be carried out.

The school year for 1917-18 closed September 18, 1917, for there were 370 pupils in 172 Provisional, and 68 Half-Time schools, making a total of 550, with 40,014 children in attendance, and 29,000 semiannual school children. He said there could be no doubt of great progress had been made in the education of the children under the Public Schools Act, and believed that it was the best thing that had been accomplished by a great majority against any chance of its failure. The Council of Education had made but trifling errors, and few men have served the country more patriotically than he. The work that had been done under the Public Schools Act had been commended in most of the other colonies, and in the House of Commons. He urged the House to hold fast by the Act, and to support it to the end, and to pass the bill-time, and unqualified for.—Captain OWEN opposed both the original motion and the amendment. He was

Sir JAMES MARTIN objected to the vote, which he contended would be a waste of public money, and that the exhibition would do more harm than good by increasing the colony in England, than it could possibly benefit by some of their products being sent to the exhibition. He ridiculed the movement which originated at the Sydney Exchange for the representation of Australia at the exhibition, and said that the representations of the merchants were given up on the understanding that they were to be received by PARLIAMENT, and he urged that the House should refuse a similar vote in the previous session. He moved that the vote be reduced to the sum of £10,000.

The Permanent Force.—Mr. PARKER moved the pension of the Standing Orders, to permit of passing through all its stages in one day of bill to appropriate the sum of £1,000,000 to the pension of the rank and file monthly pay, from the 31st December instant, for the members of the 1st Infantry Force for the loss of their services.

The hon. member concluded the motion by a formal resolution in the following terms:—MR. PARKES said the Government felt bound to support the motion.—The motion was also supported by MR. MONETARY AND MERCANTILE REVIEW.

presenting many features of importance to all who are interested in the colony of New South Wales. From a strictly commercial point of view it has been a bad year, unmarked either by those speculative speculations—which if they sometimes result in large gains, almost as often result disastrously—or by any disturbances of trade tending to weaken the credit of traders. To the wool producing and squattling class generally, 1872 has been a period of unintermitted prosperity. Their live stock prices command prices not their wool a higher value. If we turn to the miners we find that the development of our mineral resources has not in previous years received such assistance from capitalists. Neither has the use of our auriferous deposits been so fully demonstrated. To the mere capitalist whose highest idea of profit is how he can safely lock it up at a fixed rate of interest the prospect has not been quite so alluring. Gold has been too plentiful, and our monetary institutions have not been so well organized as to

Neither has the case of our surfeited deposits been so fully demonstrated. To the mere capitalist whose highest idea of economy is how he can safely lock it up at a fixed rate of interest the prospect has not been quite so inviting. Great Britain has been too plentiful, and our manufacturing institutions too burdened, with an unusually large amount of unproductive capital, have had to compete with their customers in obtaining the most productive investments. We have seen money cheaper in England than in the great financial centres of the world, and our Government enabled to place a loan here at a higher price than our own public debt has ever had in London. To the capitalist financier the year has been in other respects a year of unexampled prosperity. Twelve months have seen so much revenue collected in former months, ity to ever have our Colonial Treasurer been led to boast of such a surplus. Many persons are sanguine enough to believe that the existing state of affairs is likely to continue, that we have passed the crisis and that there will be no retrogression. We must not think that a close study of passing events warrants any such assumption as that the recent changes are likely to be permanent. As in the past we have had good seasons and bad, so they are likely to continue. If we are overburdened with debt, a few shipments such as were made by last year's mail steamer will speedily empty the greater importance, private enterprise has been called forth to show that oyster-culture may be carried with a degree of success not surpassed by the work of a husbandman.

Some years ago M. Coste noticed the decay of the oyster fisheries on the coasts of France and brought the matter under the attention of Napoleon—not the first Consul, whose ruling thought might have been suggested by the language of Ancient Pisto!—

In them 12,600 bushels of oysters have been laid down to grow and fatten. Of the "a" or spawn of oysters it is estimated that 25,000 the bushel. 12,000 bushels of these would represent a future crop of over 300,000,000. The oysters down, however, are molluscs of the second and third year, and of these from 3000 to 4000 the bushel. It is not exaggerating to say that there will be, when they are planted, some 100 millions of oysters in the claires at Gwaley Bay, preparing for future consumption. The work is rapidly approaching completion. Of the oysters ab-

There can be little doubt that before many years passed, oyster culture will be extensively practised in all the Australian colonies.

A PAPER correspondent writes:—"Wigs are out of fashion!—a committee of ladies have got that resolution. Chignons, they say, are so comfortable, and often awkward to dress, that wigs be easier, and in every way, more convenient. It can also be changed in colour, according to the colour of the dress with which they are to be worn. A grey lady may appear rosier, another in another gown, another black. (Mary Queen of England's story.)"
